1. The "School for Foreign Politics" was opened in 1948, on Bathory Street in Budapest. Students are selected from the Hungarian Workers' Party by the head of the personnel division of the Foreign Ministry, Kallo, formerly an iron worker. Language instruction covers Russian, English and French. There are no special texts for the use of professors or students. Only Communist Party pamphlets are used. An example of the type of text being used is a book on the United States by Minister of Justice Ries.
2. Training of secretaries and file clerks is under the direction of Julia Loerinc and includes instruction in politics, sociology, history, shorthand, typing and languages. The director for political studies is Marianne Janosi, from the political division of the Foreign Ministry. History is taught by Zoltan Vas and French by Maria Katona, who attended the Sorbonne in Paris. The girls in the secretarial course have had only four, or at most eight years of elementary schooling.
3. The following officials of the Foreign Ministry are permanent professors:
 Peter Zoltan Vas
 Dr. Gedeon Dienes
 Gergely
 Mrs. Bilkei-Papp
 Mrs. Kato Sipos
4. The following are temporary professors:

Ivan Boldizsar, political instruction
 Soltesz, political economy
 Solyom, military instruction
 Aladar Mod, history lectures.
